

Snowman, snowman who's got your snow?

Today 23rd may 2011 in the kindy room Hannah, Ruby, Keira, Freya, Mitchell and Isla played their own version of “Doggy, doggy who’s got your bone?” it was called “Snowman, snowman who’s got your snow?” They sat down in a circle and one person went in the middle and closed their eyes while crouching on the floor. They decided to use a white pom pom ball as a piece of snow, the piece of snow was given to a child in the circle and then they all had to put their hands behind their backs. This all happened while they sang their song.....

“Snowman, snowman who’s got your snow?”

Someone stole it from your igloo.

Wake up snowman, wake up now”

Then the person in the middle would go around the circle asking the other children if they had their snow? Once they found the person with their snow they would change over and the game would continue. It was great to see that the kindy children were able to convert a song they knew into their own version, keep up the great creative thinking.
